

TIPS FOR LAVATORY WITH EXCESSIVE EXPECTATIONS

Wouldn't it be nice if you can feel the change of the seasons looking at trees outside from the window while washing face. That would make a brisk morning. Mirror position would matter to those doing make-ups in the lavatory.

One day I had a request for both a window and a mirror in the front. Besides, they should be close so that one can see her own face well. I made the following to meet their expectation. Bay window vertically long transparent glass upper part lower part jalousie window for ventilation. The mirror came in the middle, only 45 cm away from the near side. This idea was quite a success and made the client happy because she can see both the outside and her own face.

"Finding a way to fulfill two contradicting things at the same time leads to a creative work" seems like the formula. Whether this case be a creative work or not, pursuing the task without giving up can bring us solutions.

There might have been various alternatives: juxtapose a window and a mirror, or putting the mirror at the front with windows in both sides. Be greedily creative with based on your lifestyle.

lavatory and undressing room are often combined as one (in some cases, laundry room or dry room as well). Though it all depends on the way those spaces are connected, we better reconsider which one to connect and which one to separate according to their purpose and use.

I have tried redefining a warm living room as a undressing room in the house where the kids live, or connecting a private room directly with a bathroom. You can make a washstand more open, placing it in a corner of corridor or a room.

If you put a laundry machine together, it would involve an element of utility. Adding an extra sink for cleaning, or making a basin for multipurpose would make it easy to prewash laundry.

The more complex the function of a space becomes, the more things you put in there. Ensuring enough storage is a secret to keep the lavatory-undressing room clean and comfortable.
