

TIPS FOR FUNCTIONAL KITCHEN

the most significant transition in a house can probably be seen in the kitchen. A kitchen that no longer provides the service needed by the time will be easy subject for remodeling. It is also a place to receive detailed orders, because various facilities and things of different size and use gather there. Some prefer hanging cupboards over the sink for more storage, while others prefer outside light and breeze without them.

"Hanging Cupboards"

It will be inconvenient if they are too high. If they are low, it limits the position of the window despite its easy of use. Skylight or horizontally-long window might be a good complement in this case.

"Sink"

Needs vary according to the person who uses it. If a husband stands, a sink should probably be set high. In the case kids help doing dishes, it is preferably low. Isn't there any kitchen suitable and convenient for every member of a family? You might like use it while sitting in a chair it when exhausted. Once I had a order for a wheelchair-accessible kitchen, but it costed a lot. If a sort of "sit-chen" become more affordable, it will become less painful for elderly people living alone to do the kitchen work.

"Service Table"

Often we come across a house without a service table. A cooking table will soon be occupied by home electronics and cookwares added and multiplied every year. Putting a service table and placing a microwave, a toaster, or a blender in certain positions will prevent them from being neglected because it bothers to take them out from the cupboard. A lower service table might help disciplining kids, making it easier for them to prepare and cleanup for every dining.

"Cold Dark Place"

The more beautiful a kitchen gets, the more noticeable the need for a space where you can put garbage, muddy vegetables, or pickles. Facilities doing background work such as pre-washing sink is necessary near backdoor. What you really need and don't will loom out of analyzing everyday's work procedure. Why not giving your lifestyle a chance to "diet"?
